New Selling System Aids Hog Producers

Price Agreed Upon Right in The Pen

Under a new system of selling hogs, buyers and salesmen at the markets agree on the price right in the pen before the hogs are weighed. Thus the old weight-schedule is being replaced by a pen-to-pen system of marketing. The buyer is given a chance to recognize quality and pay a premium for good hogs.

The quality of this Chester White sow and litter is apparent even to the casual observer; but under the old weight-schedule of selling hogs, breeders who produce such quality stock would receive nothing extra for the added time and care they had expended to bring their hogs to such a degree of excellence.

The reason advanced for increased interest in marketing is that the weight-schedule system fails to recognize the difference between hogs. It also fails to pay for true quality.

Under the old schedule-selling, salesmen and buyers at a market would agree in the morning how many hogs each buyer would get. A schedule of process was set up according to weight. "Hogs was hogs" and the scales determined the price.

But that system is gradually being abandoned. Under the old method, farmers judged probable market prices by estimating the weight of their hogs. A premium of 50 cents per hundredweight was considered unusual at the market although the real value of hogs of the same weight varies as much as $5 or $6 per animal. Such premiums offered poor pay to the expert producer who raises top-quality hogs worth more money.

Another reason for the new system is the fear that if a better job of selling isn't done, hogs may be sold on a dressed-carcass basis. This method of marketing (which is used in Canada) is being explored by many farmers, cooperatives, agricultural experiment stations and studies under the federal research and marketing act. Many public market operators also are worried about the decline in volume of hogs arriving for sale at terminal markets.

Wheat Champions

The wheat, which Victor Rasmussen is holding, is a sample of the crop from the 2,000 acres of wheat land, which is owned jointly by these two men and their brother Reuben, who was too busy farming that day to get in the picture.

The Rasmussens' wheat, which was hard red winter of the Cache variety with a test weight of 64 pounds per bushel, took first place in the 8th annual Philip W. Pillsbury judging for best United States wheat raised in 1948. The grain competed with 37 samples from 20 other states when the judging was held in Minneapolis.

The Rasmussens rotate their wheat crop on 4,000 acres of unirrigated land. They are the sons of Philip H. Rasmussen, who won the state and national Pillsbury award in 1946.

Soil Check May Answer Slow Tile Drain Puzzle

If tile-drained land is slow in drying, check the organic matter content of your soils before blaming the tile system. Many tile lines that worked well when originally laid are now hampered because the water can't get through the soil to the tile. You open your soil and improve drainage when you grow well-fertilized deep-rooted legumes in the rotation and put back straw, cornstalks and manure.

Harry Miller Rated as Best Friend of Dog

A kennel owner in Nova Scotia imported a valuable boxer from England, only to have her die and orphan her litter of pups. The owner began feeding the pups from a bottle, with an emergency formula prescribed by a pediatrician. Unfortunately there is a vast difference between human and canine babies. The pups grew weaker instead of stronger, and one morning one of them was found dead.

The kennel owner sent off a frantic cablegram. By noon he had an answer suggesting a new formula. The rest of the pups, put on the new diet, picked up like magic and soon were romping around as healthy puppies should.

The cablegram had gone to Harry Miller, an intent, professorial man of 47 who runs the Gaines dog research center at 250 Park avenue in New York City. Such urgent requests for help are nothing new to Miller, and he had the information right at his finger tips. It was just another routine victory for the man who has become known as the dog's best friend.

Once Was Hobby

For a long time Harry Miller's self-dedication to the dog was a hobby.

But in 1943 he persuaded a manufacturer of prepared dog foods to set up the Gaines dog research center. The center is believed to be the only organization in the world actively collecting, evaluating and passing along to breeders, veterinarians and owners every known worthwhile fact concerning the health and well-being of dogs. It makes no attempt to sell anything except possibly the idea that the dog is superior to any other four-legged animal in the history of mankind.

The arrangement works fine both ways. The more dogs there are and the longer they live, the more dog food will be sold. Meanwhile, Miller can dedicate himself to the dog 24 hours a day and still make a living.

Packed away in Miller's unfailing memory and in the 1,000 books of his library—one of the most extensive on the subject of dogs—are the answers to just about every question a dog owner could ask. And nothing makes Miller happier than to share this knowledge with the world.

Thrice-Downed Aviator Has Run of Bad Luck

CINCINNATI.—The misfortunes of C. Fred Scrimsdher are almost more than even a thrice-shot-down navy flier can stand.

Scrimsher, editor of a Schenley Industries employee magazine here, ran his car over a 60-foot embankment, suffering head injuries and a dislocated shoulder. Thieves stole his car radio and spare tire. He collided with another car and ruined a fender. He slipped on an icy street and sprained a knee and he severely burned a hand when a flash bulb exploded.

Now he's afraid the jinx is extended to his wife. She's going around with a bandaged hand due to an infection.

Average American Level Of Living Seen Rising

WASHINGTON.—The President's council of economic advisers thinks the average American's level of living should rise 27 per cent by 1958.

The council believes that he should be able to buy more and better goods and services, to save more money and have more leisure time—all making him 27 per cent better off.

The council doesn't think this will materialize by 1958 if there is a depression before then—there would have to be a gradual, steady increase in production with no serious setbacks.

But it can be achieved, the council says, if government and business continually make a variety of delicate and complex economic adjustments and don't miss any guesses on what adjustments to make.

This is all part of the theory of a dynamic, ever-growing economy that became part of the law of the land in the Employment Act of 1946. This theory holds that the causes of depressions can be detected and eliminated so that as fast as the labor force grows more jobs can be provided.

Considerable Care Urged in Tree Moving

Considerable care should be exercised when young fruit trees are moved from the nursery to an orchard or yard where soil fertility and other conditions may be less favorable.

Dr. Lee Schrader of the horticulture department, University of Maryland, points out that when trees are dug for shipment, part of the root system inevitably is lost. After the trees have arrived, new roots — sufficient to supply water and minerals to the entire tree — must be grown in order to insure normal development. Lack of adequate root growth, Dr. Schrader warns, often results in death of the tree or, at best, a poor growth of new shoots, particularly where the soil is low in certain minerals.

European Corn Borer Reduced Crop in 1948

The European corn borer reduced the 1948 crop of field corn by 86 million bushels, the U.S. department of agriculture announced in Washington, D. C. Surveys recently completed by the bureau of entomology and plant quarantine, with cooperating agencies, indicate this loss in corn production is more than double that of 1947.

Mechanical Cleaner Suggested for Barns

If you're building a new barn, or remodeling an old one, it would be a good idea to include plans for installing a mechanical barn cleaner. That's the advice of M. W. Forth, an engineer with the University of Illinois college of agriculture.

Forth says it would pay to make provisions for a barn cleaner even though plans might not call for one right away.

NEIGHBORS - JENNINGS

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Jennings have announced the marriage of their daughter, Marie to Clyde Neighbors, of Lynchburg. The wedding was solemnized at the Methodist parsonafe Friday, June 24, with the Rev. A. L. Simpson officiating.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Jennings will make their home at Pamplin.

County Agent Asks Return Of Cards

Rural mail carriers, during the first week of June, left a card in the box of about one farmer in twelve on their routes. The purpose of these cards is to secure information which the Department of Agriculture uses to estimate the spring pig crop, milk production, number of lambs saved, and chickens and turkeys raised. This survey is made in all counties throughout the country, and this is the twenty-fifth year the information has been collected.

R. B. Hudgins, County Agent, urges each farmer in Appomattox Co, who received one of these cards to fill it out and return it to his mail carrier. Individual reports are kept confidential and only county and state totals will be published.
